Insert Team Here: Scenarios

Scenario 1: Programmer looking to form team.
Let's say Paul the Programmer has a great idea for a video game. He knows he's going to need other programmers and artists to help him realize his dream, so he goes to this great site he heard about for collaborating on creative projects, Insert Team Here. He goes to the Insert Team Here main page (MP), and clicks the link that will take him to the account creation page (AP). Once he has created an account, he goes to the Team List Page (TLP) and creates a new team. With his account and team created, he begins using the search/posting page (?P) to find other people who can help him realize his dream.

Scenario 2: Artist looking for a project to work on.
Amber is a graphic artist looking to work on games. She goes to Insert Team Here, creates an account, and begins looking for teams that require an artist on the search/ posting page. After finding a few interesting teams, she goes to the Team Page for the teams she is interested in and asks to join those teams.

Scenario 3: Musician looking for a project to work on.
Mark is a musician who would love to get into game music. A friend is working on a team that is collaborating through Insert Team Here, and sends Mark the link to the Team Page. Mark thinks the team looks really interesting, and so clicks the link to join the team. Insert Team Here sees that Mark isn't logged in, and so takes him to the login page, where Mark creates an account and is redirected back to the team page to complete his application to join.
